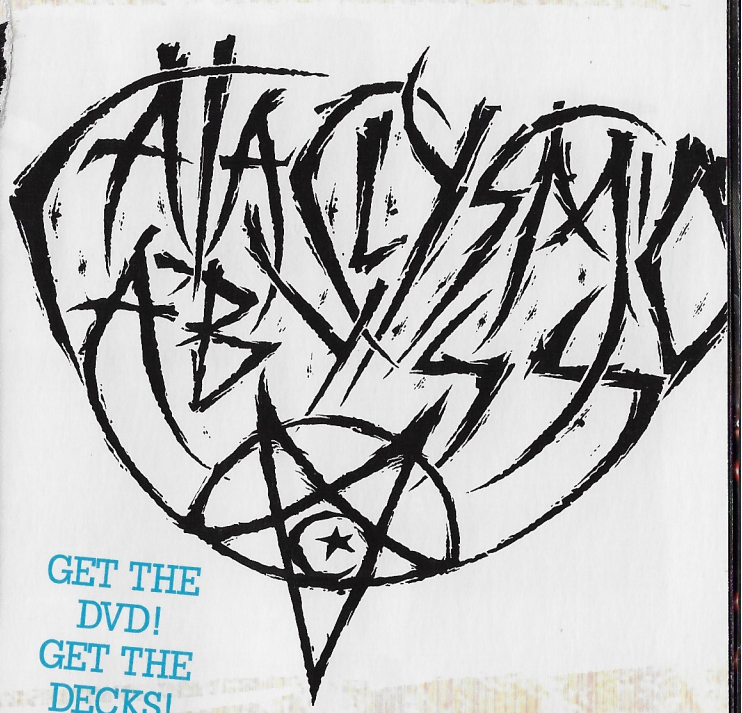
Andrew Groves aka IMAKETHINGS is an illustrator and maker of things from the UK but he has spent the last couple of years living in Japan making life difficult for himself. His work is influenced by mountains, oceans and forests and the secret lives of the creatures and beasts that live within them.

The "Secret Beasts" series illustrates the hidden but frighteningly beastly side of each of the Foundation Pro team skaters, resulting in lavishly coloured monsters featuring abnormal numbers of body parts and mutated faces.

IMAKETHINGS continues to try and get his artwork on and in as many things as possible and plans to one day live in a hut in the wilderness and learn about mountains and trees and study the ways of bears and wolves.



fiberlam TECHNOLOGIES™

FIBERLAM construction is 5 HRM veneers sandwiched in between 2 FIBERLAM high density thermal poly plys with an embedded ultra fine homogeneous commingled stranded filament. That's the technical terminology. What does it mean? Good shit!

FIBERLAM top and bottom sheets gives greater upward flex strength and overall board stiffness keeping the board stiffer longer and increases overall board strength giving you a board with a longer life then the tradition all wood construction. The top and bottom layers are where the most pressure on a deck happens. When they give they all give. FIBERLAM keeps it tight.

FIBERLAM has a greater slide potential with less surface wear. FIBERLAM gives smoother, faster, easier slides on rails, ledges, curbs and nudity.

FIBERLAM is made in the USA exclusively by Watson Laminates.
